

Your rights when choosing a school to be named in an EHCP

Choosing a school or educational setting that can meet the needs of a child or young person can be a difficult task. However, the right to choose is underpinned within the legal framework. Read our newest education team recruit's first article here.

by Madeleine Oakley

Moving staff to a 4-day working week: Legal considerations for employers

Between June and December 2022, a pilot study was undertaken in the UK in which 61 UK-based companies with more than 3,300 employees trialed a four-day working week. Find out more from Julie's article.

By Julie Temple

Catchment areas and house prices

Is now a good time to move house? How far should parents plan ahead to ensure their child goes to their dream school? In this article we take a look at how schools determine catchment areas, the effect on house prices and how to plan ahead.

By Sarah Murphy

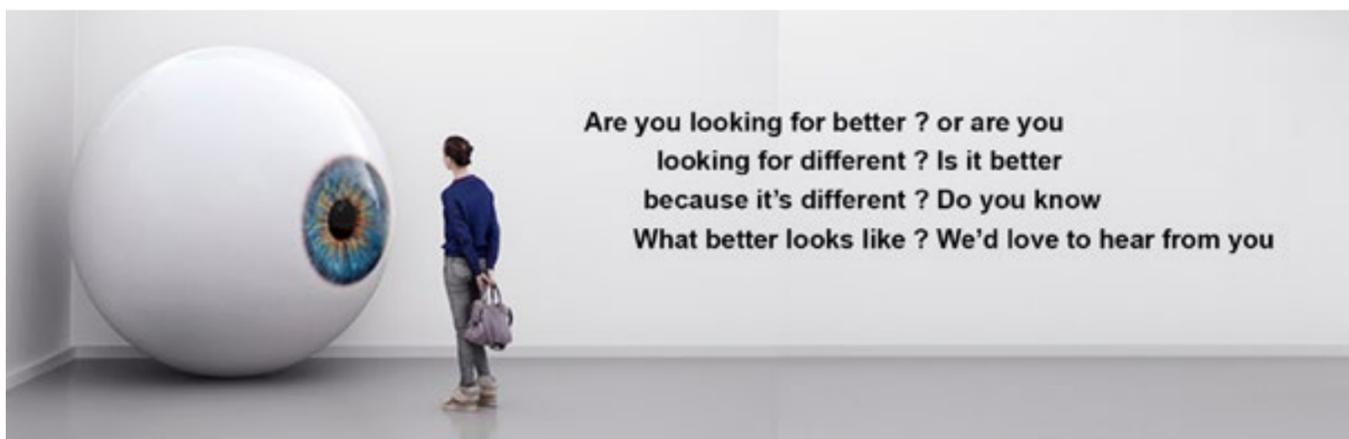

What are your rights as a grandparent?

At times, family life can be complicated for us all. When family rifts occur it can be damaging for everyone but especially children. Understanding what your rights are as a Grandparent is important to taking your first steps to heal a rift.

by Francesca Cozens

look

For some free advice just register

In case you missed it

- Don't get caught out when transporting horses during eventing season
- Birkett Long assists Vantage Market Entry on management buyout
- Climate Change: risks to property investors
- Can trespassers now be prosecuted?